FOUR MUSEUMS IN TROUBLE.

Licenses Refused for Their Theatrical Performances.

The theatrical performances of four of the greatest fine museums in the city have been stopped by the police on orders issued by Capt. Murray. This does not affect the show parts of the museum, which will continue open.

The superintendent's action was based on a report from the Mayor's office, to the effect that the licenses of the museums had name-sighted Nov. 1 and had not been renewed.

The embargo embraces both of John B. Davis' museums, one at 351 Eighth avenue and the other at 2286 Third avenue; the Grand, at 345 and 347 Grand street; Peck & Fursman, proprietors, and Huber's Palace Museum in Fourteenth street.

Each of the museums has refused to renew its license and a report was made to the Police Department and the president captain made reports which were forwarded to the Mayor.

Capt. Murray reports the Mayor based his refusal to renew the license and a report was made to the Police Department that the museums were operating without license. Then the embargo was placed.

The police reports in each case show that arrests have been made at each of the mentioned museums for violation of the law in admission.

Under the law children under sixteen years of age cannot be admitted unless accompanied by a parent or guardian.

In addition to Peck & Fursman, proprietors of the Grand Museum, Sergt. Timothy J. Creedon, of the Eleventh Precinct, certified to the good character of the proprietors and the seemingly good character of the patrons.

He states that no liquor is sold in or within 100 feet of the museum, and bases his statement on the fact that an unlicensed house located only on the arrests made because of the illegal admission of children.

Capt. McCullough, of the Fourteenth Precinct, makes a report almost exactly similar in the case of Huber's Palace Museum, and those made by Capt. Westervelt and Capt. Cross of the Twelfth Precinct's museums seem to have been drawn up in the same form—the language in each report being almost identical.

The police reports on these applications were made Nov. 11, and Major Grant's confidential clerk, George H. Best, says that they were received on the morning of Mayor Grant's departure.

The interested museum proprietors, backed by powerful local politicians, besieged the Mayor's office that day, threatening the anger of the public if the Mayor Grant was obdurate, and would not sign the renewals of license asked for.

From the eloquence of Barron Hourke, of Alton, who was called to demand of Peck & Fursman, proved unavoidable.

Since Mayor Grant had been unable to receive the men until after he had left, he had them arrested for obstructing justice.

The men had all been in this country for some time and destined to return to Italy. They were told, they say, by Angelo Martini, of 113 Murray street, that he could get them tickets for $10 each.

They paid the money to him and were by him given the tickets, which were impossible to keep out of sight, so that they may endeavor to do so. The law says that they may be admitted when accompanied by their parents.

It does not say "legal guardians," and the doorkeeper isn't compelled to demand a certified copy of the letters of guardianship.

It is not clear that children are accompanied by an adult is enough for the doorkeeper.

The children are lost, and since in beside the law of few ages ago, and the doorkeeper does not know that that person is in the child's company.

"I can't understand why we should be refused a license simply because arrests have been made, but it is not less important to keep children out, than it is to keep them in, to do what we can."

"I've got two cases in the police courts this morning, where my people have been charged with obstructing justice, but they are just such cases as I have had before. There is no intention on our part to violate the law."

"This closing of the museums will be quite agreeable to us, as it will give us more space."

"It had become the bad on the west side to frequent my home in Eighth avenue, and the people there found me at being deprived of their amusement through the action of the police."

"It was a great resort for women and their children, and the law did nothing."

THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA ASHORE ON GOVERNOR'S ISLAND.

OUT OF THE JAWS OF DEATH.

Mrs. Buchler Pulled Her Husband from Before a Train.

The venerable and eccentric, Dr. George Buchler, a retired physician who lives at 251 West Forty-fifth street, lies critically ill at Governor's Island, near Newburgh, and his son, Dr. Augustus Buchler, to whom the old gentleman long ago turned over his lucrative practice, has been called upon to perform the professional duty of amputating his father's left arm.

The arm was crushed to a jelly under a locomotive's wheels at the Cranston's station at 1:30 yesterday afternoon, and it is said that the white-haired old practitioner threw himself before the train with a cry of "Let me die!"

Dr. George Buchler, who is about seventy years old, met with an accident in alighting from a Coney Island train last summer and has since been exceedingly nervous and excitable, and sometimes morose and despondent. He had been for two weeks with his doctor, Dr. Best, after receiving his report.

Under the circumstances, said Inspector Steely, after receiving his report, "I don't see how he can be held responsible for his conduct." Dr. Best, after receiving his report, "I don't see how he can be held responsible for his conduct."

He is the finest vessel of the State line's fleet. Her commander is Capt. Brice, of Glasgow.

The State of California had seventy-eight saloon passengers and 126 in the steerage.

Miss Hamilton Salvatore, of 238 East Thirtieth street, made complaint to Justice Grady, in the Yorkville Court to-day, against Herman Bender, of 243 East Thirtieth street, charging him with pestering her with his attentions and sending her annoying letters.

Miss Salvatore, a pretty Italian girl, with black hair and black eyes, is a pianist employed in Gardner's Concert Hall, Eighth street, near Fourth.

Bender fell in love with Miss Salvatore last summer and followed this up by starting to write love-letters, two of which he more than once sent to her in one day.

Miss Salvatore at first, it appears, rather liked the attention of her "half-razed, rather wild" admirer, but later she grew tired of his persistence.

In a long epistle written a few days ago Bender went so far as to threaten the young girl with a knife if she would not give him his heart.

When Bender was brought into court he blushed and cried. He told the Justice that he loved the young woman to distraction and could die with pleasure to her sake.

The happy couple held to $600 ball for trial in the Court of Special Sessions.

They arrived all in good time at the station, and Dr. Buchler paced up and down the platform, his arms clasped by his sides, waiting for the train to come.

At 1:30 the train drew up at the station the old man dropped his hat and either bell or shrill whistle off the platform and before the train started advanced to the door.

When the door opened he blushed and cried. He told the Justice that he loved the young woman to distraction and could die with pleasure to her sake.

These facts were brought out in court, and then Mrs. Budd asked:

"Have I or have I not a right to turn a person out of my house when I don't want them and don't want to do it in my place, and I don't want to do it in another place?"

Dr. Buchler corroborated his wife's statements and disclaimed any matrimonial relations with her. The old man was discharged by the court.
